

Tone-deaf in Oak Square

By Boston Herald editorial staff
Friday, June 10, 2005

Could the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston prove itself any more tone-deaf than it did this week by literally changing the locks on the doors of Our Lady of Presentation School days before the end of school and graduation.

It was all "for the safety of the children" insist church officials, as if parents would do anything to traumatize their own children by way of protesting the closing of the school. Yes, parents wanted to buy the school building from the archdiocese and the community came up with a terrific plan for its reuse. But church officials had plans of their own. To add this final insult to that injury is simply beyond belief.
