HEADLINE: Locked school doors disgrace archdiocese

BYLINE: Dianne Tullish, Marshfield

BODY:

Once again the Archdiocese of Boston has put its needs first, in front of the needs of its children.

It is an absolute disgrace that these young children (the future of our Catholic faith) were denied access to finish the school year in Brighton.

What kind of an education did they get on finding out their school doors were locked to keep them out?

To quote Archbishop Sean O'Malley while he was visiting St. Joseph's Elementary School in Holbrook on Wednesday, "We're very proud of our Catholic schools and we are anxious to see them prosper. We're glad that you're here as students. You're what it is all about."

I find those interests to be very confusing. I can't help but to wonder if Archbishop O' Malley called Rome to ask for the advice of Cardinal Law. DIANNE TULLISH Marshfield
